that is in their capacity. It has changed children's perspective towards life. For them, materialism is happiness. They pester their parents to fulfill their demands for gadgets, etc., even though there is no genuine need for the same. Children want these in order to impress their friends. Materialism makes us greedy. We try to show off what we have and are embarrassed if we do not have something that others possess. The world has become a place for the competitions where everyone aims to be ahead of other. Youngsters need to understand that money does not bring happiness. It is more important to be content. We need to have values, friends, relations and above all our family's love and support to lead a happy life.
